Thinking Out Loud

H. M. L.

King Edward, the irresistable force, has met Squire Baldwin, the immovable mass, and there has been an impasse. It is a situation that affords Americans amusement and at the same time arouses admiration for certain British qualities deemed traditional and typical. Assuming that reports from the scene of the impasse are true, the King refuses either to give up his throne or Wallis Simpson. We commend his spirit but deplore his judgment.

Even in this country a person who has been twice married arouses suspicion that a habit is being formed. The first divorce is charitably and generally regarded as an unfortunate accident. But the second, while it may be just another accident, is usually regarded as a step in matrimonial progression. Wallis Simpson, of an old Maryland family, but very poor in world's goods, has notably bettered herself with each marriage.

Socially speaking the apex of any woman's ambition could not overtop the position of the wife of the British monarch. From the standpoint of social rank, no other woman in the world occupies so eminent a place as does the Queen of England and Empress of India. We strongly suspect that our Wallis, having mounted two rungs in the ladder of her social ambition is now making a flying leap to the top-most rung. Whether she will grasp it and roost there forever more, is still a question.

To King Edward who desires to lead a life at least as happy as that of an average English citizen, must be accorded that man-to-man admiration which free and independent American citizens feel for a man who makes his choice matrimonially and sticks to it come hell or high water. We admire his courage and his steadfast determination to make Wallis Simpson his wife. We cannot, as remarked before, admire his judgment in the matter. But what man in love ever weighs the pros and cons, measures his lady's antecedents with painstaking care, or coolly calculates the life he must live in the years to come with his chosen one.

To the British Premier must go another prize for blundering. His opposition and that of the Victorian minded Englishmen of his class, could only strengthen the monarch's obstinate determination to have his way, if need be by an appeal to the British people themselves. To voice his opposition, to argue with his King, was most disastrous.

It seems almost certain that if Edward appeals to the people as he threatens, through a "fireside" talk, he will receive their enthusiastic support. He is idolized by his people as no ruler has been since his great-grandmother Victoria was queen. Their verdict will be for the king.

Squire Baldwin has helped nothing, but had he waited, it is quite possible that Edward, pondering his destiny, might have looked more closely into the character of the woman he proposes to marry. There might have come moments when the winds in the market place would have blown aside her glamorous veil, and he would abruptly see her as an ambitious and venturesome climber who in her quest of high places had discarded two husbands. Then he could have paid whatever price it is that royalty pays under such circumstances, gallantly excused himself, and gone his way, wiser and it may be, sadder. But now, according to reports, he has defied the archbishops, the premier and the cabinet, and declared, willy nilly, that he will marry Mrs. Simpson. In other words he has "passed his word" and he means to keep it. Up till that moment, he was more or less a free agent, but now he has defiantly given his bond, which involves his honor, and is bound by it. As an ally of Mrs. Simpson, blundering Squire Baldwin wins first prize.

So far as trepidation over an heir to the throne is concerned there is no reason on earth why anyone should be exercised. There are plenty of heirs in the royal family, should this unusual alliance prove unproductive. If there happened to be heirs springing from this union of the house of Plantagenet with an old Maryland family, Americans would probably take an amused interest in them. If they should be a bit brighter than the usual run of British royalty, they might even be a source of pride to admirers of English people on this side of the Atlantic. In any event, from this distance, the question of heirs does not seem worth the tremendous dither the British make over it.

Newmans Seek Way To Get New Trial

A petition requesting Judge Raglan Tuttle to declare Monte and Merrit Newman paupers in order that they might receive free transcript of the court testimony given during their trial for murder September 14, 1936 to September 22, 1936 was filed in the county clerk's office today. The Newman brothers, sentenced to life imprisonment for murdering Christian Myer on July 12, addresses their petition from Folsom prison where they are incarcerated.

At the time sentence was passed on them they did take an appeal, and two days after they were sentenced the deadline for making such an appeal lapsed. In the petition the Newman's make it clear, however, that they will seek to carry their case to the Supreme Court. They state that their first trial was not fair and impartial and that their attorney E. H. Armstrong inadvertently did not make an appeal from the judgment of life sentence that was rendered. At the time the case was closed Armstrong said that he felt he had done all he could for the Newmans and that a new trial would possibly result in a death sentence.

Judge Tuttle stated that he would refuse the petition, because the two brothers had waived their right to appeal.

WIDER APPROACH TO COURT HOUSE NEEDED

A Chamber of Commerce committee this morning conferred with the board of county supervisors regarding the proposal to purchase the Daniels building, tear it down and enlarge the approach to the court house. Chairman E. B. Dudley of the board, stated that if there were no objection the board would take the matter under advisement. A great many citizens have remarked that some means should be found for widening the approach to the court house and providing more parking space.

The chamber committee which is promoting this impfovement consists of W. F. Roddy, chairman, John Fortier, Ward Sheldon, Dr. David Reeder, and Walter Carlson.

ANTONIO FRADELIZIO LAID TO REST TODAY

Funeral services were held this afternoon at 2o'clock from the chapel of the Holmes Funeral Home for the late Antonio Fradelizio with Rev. Father O'Reilly officiating. Officers of Corte Cristofero Columbo read the funeral ritual of the order.

Deceased, aged 55, passed away early Saturday morning following a prolonged illness which caused him much suffering which he bore with great fortitude.

Tony Fradelizio born in Italy in 1879 came to Nevada City about 36 years ago. He worked in the mines, and later became a business man and owned the Italia Hotel. He had many friends in this city. His hobby was hunting and fishing which he greatly enjoyed until the time of his illness. He was a member of Corte Cristofero Columbo, Nevada County Foresters and Wyoming Tribe of Redmen.

Deceased is survived by his widow Mrs. Rose Fradelizio, and two daughters, Mrs. Ida Atkinson and Miss Mamie Fradelizio all of Nevada City.

GRAND JURY IS HELD OVER ANOTHER YEAR

Judge Raglan Tuttle today announced at the court house that the grand jury now in session will be held over for another year. As a result no grand jury will be drawn this year. This system not only saves the county a considerable sum of money but will result in increased efficiency. Judge Tuttle stated. Chester Scheemer, Nevada City merchant is foreman, and Mayor Ben Hall of this city is secretary.

PLACER MINE MEN ASK MORE DATA FOR GOV'T.

At the Hydraulic Mining Association of California meeting held in the National Hotel Saturday, insurance rates for hydraulic mining, assurances demanded by the War Department, land values in the hydraulic mining districts and roads into the hydraulic mining country were the subjects of consideration.

J. K. O'Brien of Smartsville stated that there was little hope for the proposed road from Downieville to Marysville and that money expended in Sierra county would be used to open up the Alleghany district.

The state rate of $9.15 for every $100 of payroll to compensate for silicosis was objected to by the association. C. E. Clark, chairman of the committee on this subject stated that no medical authority could be found who would state that he had ever seen a case of silicosis contracted in a hydraulic mine. Dr. Peers, of Colfax, authority on tuberculosis, stated that he had never found such a case. Clark asserted that there was no silicia dust in hydraulic mines, in fact no dust as hydraulic mining is essentially wet mining.

Congressman Harry L. Englebright pointed out that it is very necessary that all assurances be taken care of immediately so that construction may be begun by next June. It was pointed out that the war department demanded guarantees of the financial status, the condition of their property as to title, financial encumbrances and ability of the parties to finance operations.

Fred E. Conner, president of the Chamber of Commerce welcomed the group. Mrs. A. Merriam Conner presented a poem "Resume" which was greatly enjoyed and incorporated into the by-laws of the association.

MARY LOPEZ FUNERAL SERVICES TOMORROW

Deceased was found dead in her bed at about 7:30 Saturday evening by her husband, Joaquin Lopez. At six o'clock when Mr. Lopez came home he found her ill in bed After ministering to her comfort he lay down for a rest. When he arose about an hour and a half later he went to his wife's room and found her dead.

No physician being in attendance Coroner ordered Dr. B. W. Hummelt to perform an autopsy and the resultant decision was that death was due to natural causes and no inquest was necessary.

Mrs. Lopez was born in Nevada City about 52 years ago and is survived by her husband Joaquin Lopez, her mother Mrs. Mary Orzalli; brother, Leslie Orzalli, all of Nevada township; her daughter, Mrs. William Ghidotti of Grass Valley and a number of nephews and nieces.

HIGHWAY WILL BE STRIPED THIS WEEK

The Nevada City-Grass Valley highway is expected to be striped sometime this week, F. R. Garrison, local highway maintenance superintendent states.

Double lines, which will prohibit passing, will be placed at the city limits of Nevada City and at Shaw's Fruit stand.

The Gault bridge across Deer Creek on Pine street in this city, is closed to traffic today while repairs are being made. Flooring is to be laid and new stringers put in. This bridge is a part of the Tahoe-Ukiah highway.

COMMUNITY CHEST PLAN IS GIVEN HEARING

Responding to an invitation issued by the Community Chest Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, representatives of five organizations which make annual solicitations for funds met Friday night in the Chamber of Commerce assembly room and went over the proposed plan. At the conclusion of the discussion, it was decided that another meeting shall be held on Friday evening, January 8 to make a final decision.

Those who met with the chamber committee were. Horace Curnow, Frank Finnegan, Mrs. Bellee Douglass, Mrs. W. P. Sawyer, Miss Winnie Mulloy, Mrs. Leland Smith, Mrs. Zoe Kazerer and John W. O'Neill. The community chest committee representing the chamber consists of H. E. Kjorlie, W. F. Roddy and H. M. Leete.

Suggestions made were: that the drive for the community chest should lead off with Donation Day some time in the spring; that there should be included in the Community Chest the following organizations, Benevolent Society, Boy Scouts, Red Cross, Salvation Army, and Camp Fire Girls. These would require, according to figures gathered at the meeting a total of $1,650 this coming year. Such organizations as the Volunteer Firemen, the Parent Teacher Association, and others, who raise money by offering an entertainment, would not be included in the chest activity.

Proponents of the plan declared that one solicitation a year would save the time of many committees during the year, and that merchants generally speaking would prefer to give in one lump sum for all the organizations rather than through five solicitations made at intervals during the year. There was a question raised whether, by making one big campaign for funds, as much money would be raised as by making several small campaigns.

P. T. A. PLANS AID FOR PUPILS IN NEED

At the meeting of Washington Grammar School P. T. A. Friday afternoon Mrs. Oscar Odegaarde, gave the report on a conference of preschool age children. Mrs. E. T. Bonner, president, appointed Mrs. Lester Gregory, Mrs. Oscar Oregaarde and Mrs. Stevens as a committee to see what can be done about several children that need care.

The next meeting will be held on Thursday, December 17 in Washington Grammar School at 3 o'clock. It is desired that all come, early as everyone will have a chance to view special exhibits in class rooms made by the pupils. This is expected to be of interest to mothers who have children in school.

FINED $100 FOR CUTTING TREES WITHOUT PERMIT

Edgar Waggoner, recently apprehended by Forest Service Law Enforcement Officer J. D. Rafferty for cutting Christmas trees without permit on National Forest lands in Six Mile Valley, was fined $100 in Judge Runckle's court at Dutch Flat Friday, according to report received from the office of DeWitt Nelson, supervisor of the Tahoe National Forest. One hundred twenty trees had been cut, of which one hundred had already been sold. The remainder were confiscated and Waggoner was given a stay of execution of four days to pay the fine or serve a sentence in jail.

Lou Develey plead guilty in Judge Runckle's court the same day to burning without a permit in the vicinity of Midas according to Nelson, and was fined $100. The fine was suspended and Develey placed on probation for one year This arrest was made by Officer Rafferty in a campaign to tontrol unpermitted burning. "This is especially important now," Nelson says. "on account of the extremely high fire hazard which exists for this season of the year."

Chamber Reviews All Road Projects

On the request of Fred Marsh, WPA director of this district, President Fred Conner at eleven o'clock this morning called a special meeting of the Chamber of Commerce to meet a regional WPA executive, Nils Aaronsen, who is expected to finally approve the plans for the Washington road. Thirty business and professional men of Nevada City and Grass Valley gathered to meet Mr. Aaronsen, but he did not reach Nevada City until after lunch.

In the meantime President Conner called on a number of speakers to discuss matters concerning roads. DeWitt Nelson, forest supervisor, reported that two or three surveys had been made to determine the best all year route into Alleghany, and that these surveys indicated that an improvement and partial change of location of the present Ridge road was the most feasible. He stated that thus far all work had been confined to reconnaisance, and that no plans had been made for the actual construction.

George Calanan stated that there was not much interest among the Sierra county supervisor in this road into Alleghany since the proposed road would tend to bring the trade of that community into the lower country rather than to Downieville. If the road is built, Calanan stated, it must be largely through the efforts of Nevada county business men working in cooperation with Alleghany citizens.

Fred Marsh, district WPA director, gave a brief account of the adjustments going forward in WPA organization. He said that the quota of WPA workers allowed this county is now but 120 men as compared with over 400 at this time last year. He said that WPA is now entirely separate from relief work, which has been taken over by the state relief service. Of the county's quota there are now approximately 104 men employed of whom 40 are at work on the Washington road brushing it off in preparation for grading He said that road is to be built in three units, the first from Washington up to the Giant King mine, where it crosses a creek and winds around the ridge until it crosses the present road; the second unit from this point to the Forest Service fire station, and the third from this point to the junction.

Marsh also stated that he believed the Courtney road leading into Grass Valley would also receive WP A approval. He said that the WPA is confining its projects to those that offer a marimum opporttuuity for labor and a minimum outlay for materials and that road projects suit this policy better than building projects.

Loyal Freeman, chairman of the Grass Valley chamber, stated that his organization was 100 per cent behind the Washington road project and he knew that Nevada City would give its aid when needed to the Courtney road proposal.

Judge Raglan Tuttle called attention to the need in this county of more oiled roads. He stated that in Placer county there is hardly a road dependent for maintenance upon the county funds, which is not oiled. Although Placer county gets twice as much gasoline tar money as does Nevada, Judge Tuttle thought that a beginning should be made in oiling county roads. He called attention to the fact that all main arteries in Nevada county are state highways and that this saves the tax payers an enormous sum annually.

Butte county, the judge stated, so far as its roads are concerned has adopted a centralized system. All county eequipment is in charge of the county engineer. When there is a piece of road work to be done he can apply to it all the equipment, such as rollers, steam shovels, bulldozers etc., and finish the work in a short time. Under the Nevada county system, the county is divided into districts and each supervisor has his own equipment.

E. M. Rector expressed the belief that the completion of an easy grade road into Washington will stimulate business throughout the county. He called attention to wealth of natural resources, around Washington, such as asbestos, gold and other minerals besides a large area of timber. To make these available by means of a good road he regarded as long forward step.

James C. Tyrrell of Bret Harte Inn called attention to the need of assistance to the farmers along the Courtney road. He declared that by improving the road and making farm lands adjacent to it more valuable the county would benefit in increased taxes, and that the farmers themselves, who have received little or no attention to their highway needs in the last forty years, would benefit through accessibility of markets and increased land values. He expressed a hope that something that can be done soon toward getting that project started.

Dr. A. H. Tickell sounded a note of warning against too much diversification of intedest. "Let's get the Washington road through," he advised, "and when that is done concentrate on the next important project."

Oscar Oregaarde asked whether it were good business policy to build a one way road into Washington with occasional turnouts. He thought that if the road is to be of practical value it should be a two way road. Fred Marsh replied that this construction plan was the minimum. He hoped to make it a 22 foot highway. But in any event, the old road could be used for the descent into the canyon of the South Yuba and the new road, the ascent. The old road is 4 miles long with a grade sometimes as high as 20 per cent, while the new road will be five and a half miles long with a maximum grade of 6 per cent.

James Penrose approved the comment made by Judge Tuttle respecting centralized use of county road equipment. He declared it would seem an advantage to pool road equipment and to tackle one job at a time throughout the road system, finish that, and then go to the next one.

President Conner appointed a committee of three from the chamber to co-ordinate the work of the county and the WPA in the Washington road project. These were William Griffith, Dick Goyne, and Henry Kohler. In addition these three Loyal Freeman of the Grass Valley chamber was to appoint to two others to this committee, whose names will be announced later.

It developed this afternoon that the reason Nils Aaronsen wished to meet business men of the county, was his desire to ascertain just how much money the county is prepared to contribute toward the construction of Washington road. Owing to the curtailment of WPA funds, Mr. Aaronsen felt that some definite understanding should be reached with the board of supervisors and this afternoon he and other WPA engineers conferred with the board.

We Shall Live

In all life, someone has said, there are only two great certainties—birth and death!

Whether we think much about it, or merely, subconsciously, admit it, most of us recognize the inevitability of death, at least so far as this world's joys or cares are concerned.

But there is something in us—mayhap a deeper love of country than we know, or a fierce belief that we shall live on through our children when we have ceased to live on as individuals—which makes us rebellious and incredulous at the thought of national death, or the extinction of our race.

There is something to consider, however, in this week's announcement from Washington that our birth rate has declined 25 per cent in 10 years. At the present rate, we shall reach a peak population by 1945 or 1950 and then start downhill. And once started, race suicide sweeps a nation like a tornado.

"Fifty years from now," says Dr. O. E. Baker of the U. S. Bureau of Economics, "there may be only a third as many children in the Nation as now, and only half as many women of child-bearing age."

That is the picture as it is seen by the man of mathematical mind. But somehow we can't quite believe it. We are a proud people—we Americans! If we can't survive individually, we shall probably survive collectively—even if it requires a radical adjustment of standards and a return to the good old American family of which Teddy Roosevelt preached in a bygone era.

There's far too much life in America to accept death—when it's avoidable!—Contributed.

Remember The Dead

When the wild, joyous bells ring out the old year and ring in the new, who will sound the requiem, the dirge for the tens of thousands who met violent death in the worst twelve months of slaughter the nation has even known?

There has been no civil war in America. There has been no brutal butchery with bombs and tanks and machine guns, as in Spain. And yet, when all the crushed and mangled bodies have been counted, those wantonly slain during 1936 will number Thirty Eeven Thousand, Five Hundred.

There it is, the official estimate given out last week by the National Safety Council; the year's toll of death on the highway, the toll of speed and recklesness, of careless and drunken driving. It is 500 more than last year—a new record a new all-time high.

It may soften the shock somewhat to know that the rate of increase will be smaller than it has been since 1932, and that the death rate has increased less rapidly than gasoline consumption. But that is small consolation for the needless sacrifice of 37,500 human lives.

Thirty seven thousand, five hundred! That is nine times the number of men who died in the Revolutionary War, five times as many as were killed in the Civil War's bloodiest battle at Gettysburg, and more than all the enlisted American soldiers killed in action in the World War.

When the wild joyous bells ring in the new year, there should sound also a requiem for the old year that passes on, stained with this all-time record of traffic deaths. The sobering effect of it might help move us to greater caution in 1937. Certainly something must.—Contributed.

SERVICE CLUB OF HIGH SCHOOL MEETS

The main issues before the club were: A point system for the benefit of the club, the changing of the meeting dates, and the possibility of some social function in the near future.

Although no definite plan was reached, the club decided to hold their meetings every other week for awhile.

Judge Tuttle denied their requests for probation as both have a criminal record.

After this, the Girls' League with Margaret Stevens, as president, held a meeting and the boys enjoyed football, etc., in the local field, with Mr. Barron, supervising.
